“Shad was my father's (Joe Johnson Adams) best friend from boyhood and whenever they got together later in life you could see an immediate transformation as they both returned to a shared youthful exuberance. I take solace that they are reunited in heaven along with Doris and Glenna Sue where "A good time was had by all." I wrote this for my father's funeral (where Shad stood at my side) and want to dedicate it to another man who had a powerful influence on my life.

A Father's Lesson by Joe Brian Adams

"My father never told me about the code of honor,

That code by which good men live.

Perhaps it was because his father never told him.

Perhaps neither could find the right words to convey such wisdom.

In either case, my father did teach me about honor,

Just as his father taught him.

For unlike so many,

He reverently observed the code in all aspects of his life,

So that in his passing,

Others could say,

"He was a good man."
