“ well tomorrow is your birthday and you have been gone for over a year and a half now. I think of you everyday, btw.....you were certainly a man whore, but that's ok. I think your friend misses you a lot, we all do. But her especially. She hasn't said much today, she probably is sad. I just still can't come to terms that you're gone. We definitely could use a little guidance down here on multiple things. Like what to do with certain tasks, and answers. So stop being a dick and help us a little. I miss you a lot. Happy birthday! Im gonna go eat tacos and cake....your favorites. Maybe you were helping when I wrecked, someone was. See ya on the other side..... or maybe I'll get to see a full ghost aparation or something. You were such an amazing person, well rounded with a great package to enjoy. So much fun. Remember when we literally sat at that table the entire night until sunrise talking and comparing stories and our childhood? Turns out you were 100% correct about Kat, and Jack is back to being a non compliant asshole. I really wish I knew what really happened to you that day! Good bye and please somehow let JW know everything's gonna be ok. Tim, I love you too!

“ I offer my heartfelt condolences to Tim’s family during this difficult and unexpected time. It’s been nearly 20 years since our last encounter, Tim. While living life, we sometimes forget people along the way for whatever reason, and others, we remember because of the impactful experiences we shared, that helped mold us into who we are today. After all this time, I still cherish those brief encounters! You provided me lasting memories that will live on forever in my heart and mind. During those moments, you left an indelible impression upon me. Your kindness, generosity, and fun-loving-live-life-to-the-fullest attitude was contagious. My brother and I still, to this day, talk about those moments shared with you so many years ago. Thank you, Tim. Peace be with you...

“ I met Tim through the legal profession but didn't really know him well until we discovered a common love for music, more especially metal. I enjoyed talking to him and will miss our late night conversations about law and music. He will be missed.
